One of Arnott's Stores in South Brooklyn Entirely Destroyed.

A fire that caused nearly half a million dol lars' damage and great danger to human life broke out shortly after 9 o'clock this forenoon in David F. Arnott's cotton warehouse at the foot of Twenty-seventh street, South Brook

Fifteen men were said to have jumped or to have been knocked from the pier adjacent to the building into the bay by the falling of a wall, but while several were injured so far as can be ascertained no one was killed. Among the injured are:

FOREMAN MAGWIRE, of Engine Company 20, of Tillary and Johnson streets; knocked overboard; badly bruised ; sent home.

The building was a three-story stone structure, 600 feet long and 75 feet wide. It was divided into three sections, with solid walls ough a big confiagration was at first threatened, the flames were finally confined to the first or cast section, nearest the city, where they originated.

When discovered the flames had already attained considerable headway. The first known of the fire was when a pillar of fiame

An alarm was promptly sent in by men who were loading a lighter with cotton on the laster a second and a third alarm and several special calls brought fourteen engines, the fireboats Seth Low and David A. Boody and the police reserves, under inspector Mackellar, to the scene.

Meanwhile, the flames had rapidly increased in fury. Fire Chief Nevins placed a deta b.

Suddenly, at 9.40 o'clock, the north wall, men on shore held their breath in horror, for seem to realize their danger. "Jump, men, for your lives!" rang out above the hissing and pumng of the engines and the crackling of the flames.

Some of the men heeded the warning and imped into the bay. The others were knocked into the water by the falling debris. Among those who jumped was Fire Chief Novins, with several of his firemen companions. The spectators feared Chief Nevins would surely be killed, as the fragments of the falling wall tell into the water behind him. He soon came to the surface, however, and was pulled upon a tug and taken ashore. Fire Doctor Robbins examined him and found him only slightly bruised. The plucky Chief at once returned to his duties, although dripping wet. People who do business in the neighborhow say that the north wall had been a constant the fire. The section that fell was fully 100 feet long and 50 feet high.

The first section of the warehouse con-tained 5,000 bales of cotton and a large quantity of bagging, valued at over $300,000. The loss to the building is estimated at $75,-000 and the total loss at over $400.000. The stored goods belonged to parties in New York Directly across the slip from the fire are the Waverly store houses. Fires occurred here in October, 1891, and July of this year Both times the structure was rebuilt, and it was in no danger this morning, as, fortunately, there was little wind stirring. On the way to the fire Hook and Ladde Truck No. 5 lost a wheel at Third avenue and Twenty-sixth street, and the men on board had a narrow escape from injury. A citizen named Williams was at first supposed to have been buried under the falling valls, but later he turned up un'njured. He had left the pier just before the crash came. All the men on the pier had been accounted for by the police at 12 o'clock. The rear or east wall fell at 11 o'clock and the south wall at 11.30. No one was injured. The fire is believed to have been caused by Spontaneous combustion.

The fire was under control at 1 o'clock this atternook. David Arnott, the owner of the wardhouse, arrived on the scene shortly after the fire broke out, but remained only a thort the scene.
